Dominique qualified in Bristol as a GP in 2000 and has specialised in young adult and student health, including working as an expedition doctor and police forensic medical officer, eventually becoming Director of the University of Bristol Students' Health Service from 2010 until 2017. She led a cutting edge team of 12 GPs and multiple clinical specialists in student health, and the practice was named Bristol GP Practice of the year in 2016. She is now an independent student mental health consultant for Buzz Consulting. Dominique has a particular interest in mental health, and was on the NICE (National Institute for Clinical Excellence) eating disorders committee that wrote the 2017 national guidance. She has led nationally on campaigning for better student health services, better NHS funding for student health, and better mental health provision in primary care. She has developed innovative service provision of eating disorders in Bristol. Her son has been at BGS since Reception age.

JUSTIN VAFADARI

Justin is a post-graduate student in Dyslexia and Specific Learning Difficulties at Bath Spa University. After graduating as a Civil Engineer and working on the Jubilee Line extension, he re-trained as a primary school teacher. Justin taught in a number of inner-city London primary schools before becoming a Deputy Headteacher and Inclusion Manager. He moved to Bristol in 2014 with his family to take up the post of Headteacher at The Kingfisher School, part of the Colston's Girls' School Trust. As a school leader, Justin worked with teachers to raise the achievement of dyslexic learners and is now training to specialise in this field. He is currently an Associate Lecturer in Primary and Early Years Education at UWE. He enjoys exploring the sights of Bristol with his two young boys and taking advantage of all the sporting opportunities the city has to offer.

ROMESH VAITILINGAM MBE

Romesh attended BGS from 1973 to 1979, his daughter Cara was at school from 2006 to 2016 and his son Marco is currently in the Sixth Form. He is the author of many publications in economics, finance and public policy, including The Financial Times Guide to Using the Financial Pages, now in its sixth edition (FT-Prentice Hall, 2011). As a specialist in translating economic and financial concepts into everyday language, Romesh has advised a number of government agencies and international institutions, including the European Central Bank, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the UK's Department for International Development. His work also involves consultancy for the economic research community, notably advising the Royal Economic Society and the LSE's Centre for Economic Performance on the management and development of their public profile. In 2003, he was awarded an MBE for services to economic and social science.

MARK WILSON

Mark is a Chartered Surveyor specialising in the retail sector. He is a consultant at Seven Dials Fund Management and a Director of Invia Asset Management. He has two children that have recently left Bristol Grammar School, Matthew having now graduated from Nottingham University in Politics and Economics, and Emma now at Birmingham University studying Psychology. Having previously coached junior football and rugby Mark retains a keen interest in sport, but now more as a spectator than a participant.
